

Well occupied

MARLBOROUGH Boys' College head boy Mitchell Croft, says the prefects are a great bunch of guys, and together they are supportive and make sure they have a lot of fun too. Mitchell and Marlborough Girls' College head girl Danii Hill are instrumental in bringing together the combined colleges' 2009 formal.

How has your first term as head boy been?

First term has been awesome! Real busy with organising things but loving every moment of it! The prefects are great guys to work with and the deputy head boys, Tyrone Elkington and Dan Rayner, are like my brothers.

Tell me a little about your trip to Sri Lanka and Singapore?

I went to Singapore and Sri Lanka with the Willows Secondary Schools youth cricket team; we played a total of seven games. We had an amazing time over there, Sri Lanka is such a cool place to visit, I'd happily go back any day. We were hosted by Dilmah Tea over there so we were treated well. The people are so nice to you and one of many highlights was definitely riding elephants.

What other groups or activities are you involved in at college?

I'm involved with SADD which is students against drunk driving, a student lead initiative which is great. The 40 Hour Famine is usually quite a big fundraising event for the school. I'm also the student board of trustees student representative which is a good experience. The people on the board are awesome people. Also this year I'm doing the school production of West Side Story and playing indoor cricket for school in the winter.

Do you have a good team of prefects? What are you planning for the year?

The prefects are great and are always there to help out when required. One of the goals for the whole school is "making the most of your opportunities" and we are having heaps of students getting involved.

What are your plans for the 40 Hour Famine?

Well, I would love to tell you our plans for the famine but the girls' college famine team would read this and steal our ideas! A head shaving is a big night which I'm trying to get Tyrone to do. He's a bit of a pretty boy!

I understand you will be instrumental in organising the school ball. What have you planned so far?

Yeah, that's one of the main roles for the head girl and head boy! Danii has been awesome to work with. We're getting things done every day. We've got entertainment sorted and a few other things should be done soon. Having a good time organising it though!
